

OBTAIN BANK LOANS

Typically, as a company grows, the need for working capital increases. Working capital is defined as the timing gap between when bills must be paid and when you receive cash from sales. Improvements can be gained through accounts receivable and accounts payable management. However, a gap may still exist. We have years of experience as lenders and CFOs and can design and negotiate the best deal for your company having been on both sides of the fence.

Whether you need a revolving line of credit, an equipment loan or business expansion funds, we can get the deal done for you.

Richard Burke, CPA, CGMA, CMAA, MBA

Senior Financial Executive, CFO, Certified M&A Advisor and Business Consultant